

Sometimes writers make a point, then ramble on making the same point again and again. Sometimes, though not always, it's best to make a point and let your reader go.